Preface

THE following pages contain the dry-as-dust record of a year's sales of books and manuscripts at auction. With everything arranged in a single alphabet the purpose of the record—to give prices paid for the various items at auction—is best realized, though in the case of an important library or collection there is sometimes an advantage in having the records of one sale by themselves. A great library, the accumulation of a life time, like that formed by Mr. Hoe, is an entity, it has a homogeneous quality, though if the books could be arranged in the order in which they were acquired the fact that it was a thing of growth would be plainly shown. It would show layers or strata which could be separated, or rings of growth like a tree, or more likely an ever widening spiral like the shell of an ammonite. The owner's changing tastes and ideals and aspirations could be traced.

A great library or collection is a long time in the bringing together and its dispersal lasts but a few hours or a few days only. When bidders and onlookers gather in the auction room at the sale of some notable library, they think mainly of the prices. This went cheap and that went dear; "he lost money on this" or "he made a good profit on that," they think, and in counting the profit or the loss they reckon not at all of the pleasure of acquisition and the enjoyment of possession which came to the dead and gone collector with the books. The pleasure of acquiring and the joy of possessing are elements whose value cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. The typical bibliophile who, for love of his books, buys to the full extent of his means (sometimes beyond them) coveted volumes in the auction room or at the bookseller's shop counts those days of acquisition of his literary treasures as red letter days in his calendar. The day he acquired his "Pendennis" in parts, or his "Poems of Two Brothers," or his Smith's "History of New York," will always be memorable days to him. Later, for this bibliomania grows on what it feeds upon, if his wealth warrants the indulgence, he can anticipate, (and sometimes realize) the joy of putting beside his lesser treasures a "Pauline" or a first Walton or a Brereton's "True Relation." Finally, with a perfect First Folio Shakespeare, and a Gutenberg Bible, and perhaps (though this is beyond belief) a Spanish Columbus letter, the ultimate pinnacle of book collecting will have been attained. He may fill out and broaden his collection, but greater heights he cannot achieve.

We who watched the dispersal of the Hoe collection have marvelled at the huge advances upon the prices paid by him. But in counting up the profits we have left out of our reckoning that larger profit, not of dollars, but of months and years of joy in possession which made up Mr. Hoe's half century of collecting. Mr. Hoe had a rough and unpleasing exterior and an overbearing manner, but back of that and back of the restless, energetic business man there was the true collector, the true bibliophile, and we may be certain that the happiest hours of his long and busy life were those spent among his books.

To a certain extent also this hobby of collecting fine books brings with it its own reward. The collector has the joys of acquisition and of possession, and at the end, if he has collected with discrimination, his library will sell for as much, or nearly as much as he has paid—this at least (allowing for exceptions enough to prove the rule) is the record of the book-market for the last century. In other words he "can eat his cake and have it too."

But woe to him who buys solely as an investment and feels not within him the bibliophilistic spark. Dust and ashes is like to be his portion. He might better become a book-seller and hang out a sign. The true bibliophile buys only for the pleasure of acquisition and ownership, and without definite thought of sale or profit. Then when death takes him and his treasure-house is thrown open the world will rush in to compete for its contents. If he has collected with judgment and circumspection, and time has ripened and mellowed his treasures, and if they have absorbed some of his love for them, then when all is over and the auctioneer has cried the last bid, the bystanders can say "he made a good profit on his books," even though the sums realized happen to be small.

* * * * *

Some twelve or fifteen years ago one of the most liberal buyers of fine things in the way of tooled bindings, choice collected sets and special extra-illustrated books was the great cotton-spinner Matthew C. D. Borden, and the sale of his library on February 17, 18 and 19 by the American Art Association was the most important single event of the auction season of 1912-1913. The catalogue was unskillfully prepared and ill-suited for the purpose of an auction sale, but notwithstanding this, the rarer first editions brought good prices. The fine bindings, which included many very elaborate and costly specimens, generally sold low. The very moderate prices realized upon the Kelmscott Press books printed on vellum, Grolier Club publications on vellum, and other modern books printed in very limited numbers, were a striking evidence of the change in taste among book-buyers. The demand for such books has practically disappeared. Only the best of them are any longer collector's material at all.

The American Art Association, for many years the leading house for the sale at auction of collections of fine paintings and art objects generally, has not, heretofore, given much attention to the sales of libraries and literary property. They now announce, however, that in future the sale of books and manuscripts will be a definite department of their business.

Another new auction-firm appears for the first time in the present volume of our record, the George H. Richmond Literature Company. On March 24, 25, 26, 27 and 28 this company sold the collection of Americana brought together (mainly within the last ten years) by the late Edward N. Crane of Newark, N. J. Mr. Crane was a true bibliophile and had, within a comparatively short period, brought together a remarkable collection of rarities, being altogether the most important library strictly confined to Americana which has been offered at auction in a long time. The books sold well and the total of the sale showed a very large advance upon what the collection cost him. It is an open secret that the library was bought en bloc from the Crane estate by a speculator whose acumen and foresight were well rewarded.

Besides the fourth part of the Robert Hoe library sold on November 11 to 15 and 18 to 22, the Anderson Auction Company held their usual quota of important sales. Among the more notable libraries dispersed under their management there may be noted the William C. Dulles collection of colored plate and sporting books, sold on December 10, 11 and 12, the library, mainly Americana and sporting, of Nathaniel C. Reynal, sold February 3, 4, 5 and 6; two further portions of the Benson J. Lossing collection of Autographs, sold October 28 and April 8; and the first part of the William J. Latta Napoleon collection sold April 22, 23 and 24.

Mr. Stan. V. Henkels, who is now setting up in business for himself in his own establishment, has held frequent sales, the most notable being portions of the autograph collections of Elliot Danforth, sold on December 6 and 7, and March 18, and of John Mills Hale sold on February 14 and 15, and June 3.

The collection of books on Ireland brought together by Stephen J. Richardson, probably the most extensive collection of its kind ever sold in this country, was dispersed by the Merwin Sales Company on June 3 to 5. This house also held frequent sales throughout the season.

The Boston auction house, C. F. Libbie and Co., issue more bulky catalogues, at less frequent intervals, made up generally of consignments from different owners, and hundreds of selections from their sales will be found scattered throughout the record.

The printer's copy for this volume has been prepared for the most part by Miss C. E. Dyett, and we take pleasure in making this public acknowledgment of her accurate and painstaking work.

The present volume contains records of sale of 13,640 lots, selected from 117 catalogues describing some 96,600 lots. As it may come into the hands of some persons not familiar with the work, the following explanation of the abbreviations used and of the scheme of the work is reprinted from the earlier volumes.

The name of the author (or, in the case of anonymous books, the first word of the title) is set in black-faced capitals.

Club or Press publications are (generally) under the Club or Press, and a few other books, such as anonymous histories and biographies, are entered under their subject. The titles of the various works of an author, printed in black-faced lower case type, are arranged in alphabetical order. This is followed by the place where printed, the printer (in a few cases), the date, and the size of the volume. The first portion of the description is general and applies to all copies of the work. Following this general description is the specific description of the copy or copies of the book as sold, each lot beginning a new line. This specific description is made up as follows:

First. A description of the binding, the abbreviations being those which are universally used and understood.

Second. A statement as to the condition of the particular copy recorded, if on large paper, if with extra plates inserted, if from a famous library, etc.

Third. The name of the sale where the name was given on the catalogue. This does not mean in every case that the name as given is that of the owner of the book, as additions from other unannounced sources are often included with books of a known owner.

Fourth. Capital letter, indicating the name of the auctioneer under whose management the sale took place:

A. is the Anderson Auction Company.

G. is the American Art Association.

H. is Stan. V. Henkels.

L. is Charles F. Libbie & Company.

M. is the Merwin Sales Company.

R. is the George H. Richmond Literature Company.

Fifth. The date of the sale. In case of sales of more than a single day's duration this date is that of the first day of the sale.

Sixth. The lot number in the original sale catalogue.

Seventh. The price realized. This is the price for the lot, not per volume.
